

Nikki Hunter RN, BSc, MSc, MSc

Nikki Hunter is a Registered Nurse working as an Immuno-oncology Clinical Nurse Specialist at the Royal Marsden NHS Foundation Trust. Her role covers educating and advising all clinical teams prescribing, and patients receiving immunotherapy. She runs pre-treatment patient education and well-being seminars, as well as organising "immune-related adverse event management" study days (at RMH). In 2017 Nikki launched the Immuno-oncology Nurses Forum, providing education and networking opportunities to all nurses (ANP, CNS, AOS and Research) across the tumour groups.

Following a BSc in Anthropology, and Masters degrees in Medical Anthropology and the Sociology of Death & Dying, she has a particular interest in cultural understandings of wellness and illness, and the problems of liminality and survivorship for the immuno-oncology patient.
